

Eliud Kipchoge

Mastery is a repeatable day

WHO HE IS

Kenyan runner. Two Olympic marathon golds.

2019 sub-2 challenge; not an official record.

Train. Recover. Repeat.

At Kaptagat, his day followed a simple sequence:

01
MORNING
First run

02
BETWEEN RUNS
Chores or rest, lunch and massage

03
4 P.M.
Second run

04
EVENING
Tea, rest, then sleep

Source: BBC Sport interview, 22 April 2020

Discipline had an address.

Kaptagat, Kenya: a place built around the work.

MON - SAT

Living and training with teammates was the weekly pattern Nike saw in 2025.

THE PLACE

A steady home for training.

THE PEOPLE

Teammates and a long-time coach.

His point: a bold goal needs a system you can repeat.

Source: Nike interview and camp visit, May 2025

He wrote down every training day.

In 2021, he said he had 18 years of notebooks.

INSIDE HIS TRAINING LOG

MORNING	Workout
MIDDAY	Exercises
EVENING	Workout

THE MASTERY LESSON

A record lets you see the reps behind a result.

Source: Kipchoge interview, Sports Business Journal, 2021

Copy the pattern.
Choose your scale.

You do not need an Olympian's training load.

01 CHOOSE
One Move, Read, or Grow practice.

02 REPEAT
Give it a realistic place in your day.

03 RECORD
Log the actual minutes in TikTym.

AFTER 7 DAYS
See what fit. Adjust next week.

PHOTO / CC BY 2.0
"London Marathon 2018 (41594080092)" by Paul Hudson; cropped by TikTym. Wikimedia Commons:
commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:London_Marathon_2018_(41594080092).jpg creativecommons.org/licenses/by/2.0/